HOWARD'S

INSURANCE AGENCY,

Office No. 3 Exchange Block,

EAST END KENDUSKEAG BRIDGE, BANGOR, MAINE.

In presenting the following Abstracts from the last Annual Reports of the Companies represented at this Agency, and published herewith, in compliance with the law of this State, the subscriber takes pleasure in calling the attention of his patrons and the public to their splendid financial condition, the magnitude and character of their investments.

These Companies, so long and favorably known in this community, many of them with a record of more than sixty years, offer to those seeking PERFECT INDEMNITY against loss or damage by fire, the ample security afforded by their magnificent capitals, and, in the event of loss, the same prompt, liberal and honorable adjustment for which they have always been distinguished.

Particularly would I invite attention to the VERY LOW RATES at which dwellings and out-buildings, either in city or country, are now insured by these Companies. Policies on this class of property are issued for any period from one to five years for VERY MUCH LESS THAN THE COST OF INSURING IN THE BEST MUTUAL COMPANIES, and as no premium notes are required, owners of property avoid the annoyance and inconvenience of assessments, as none are ever made.

Policies upon all kinds of property liable to loss or damage by fire are promptly written at rates of premium ADEQUATE TO THE HAZARD, which will be made specific on each and every risk according to its character, which will be fixed and agreed upon at the time of insuring.

STATE NEWS.

Cumberland.

In the Supreme Court at Portland, Mrs. Charles H. Pearson recovered one thousand dollars from the city on account of personal injuries resulting from a defective highway.

Franklin.

The bears still continue their depredations in the region of Kingfield. About twenty-five have been killed within a few weeks, making about fifty that have been killed within 12 miles of Kingfield, the past season.

The Chronicle reports considerable sickness at New Sharon.

Hancock.

The American says that the indictment against McLaughlin, of Great Pond, who made an assault on Haynes, was continued on motion of Co. Attorney, on account of Haynes being unable to attend court, and respondent's bail was reduced from $500 to $250.

Kennebec.

The Journal says that notwithstanding the large number of dwelling houses built in Augusta the past season, there is still great demand for rents, and desirable tenements are hard to find. And now, if everybody don't go to building, these investments in houses will be good.

The Kennebec Journal says that Gilman, the man who had a whole arsenal at his back in Waterville, the other day, was re-arrested Thursday, by order of the Judge, an indictment being found against him by the grand jury. The Journal understands that he acknowledges that he did the shooting and would do it again under similar circumstances. He says he meant to kill Edwin Noyes and others.

Knox.

The North Bank of Rockland having surrendered its charter, the plates and bills of the bank were recently destroyed at the office of the Secretary of State at Augusta in the presence of the Treasurer of State. Eighty-nine thousand dollars worth of unsigned bills were burnt, and the plates destroyed. The institution will become a national bank. There remains but one other State bank in Maine—the Eastern of Bangor.

Lincoln.

The dwelling house and barn of Mrs. Louisa Miller, of Round Pond, with most of the contents, was burned on Sunday evening last. The cause was probably from a defective chimney which communicated fire to the wood-work.

Oxford.

The Press says that Frank A. Clark, traveling agent for C. H. Walker & Co., of Portland, met with a severe accident in Denmark, Thursday, by accidentally discharging a revolver while endeavoring to shoot a partridge beside the road, the ball entering the center of the palm of the right hand and passing out on the back of the wrist.

Somerset.

The Kennebec Framing and House Furnishing Co., of Fairfield, have done quite an extensive business, many of their frames containing 75,000 feet of lumber. Nearly 200 car loads of freight sent from their mill and over 3,500,000 feet of lumber handled is a pretty good six months' work for a new concern.

Joshua Piper of Starks, lost a four months old colt recently, singularly. The colt reared up beside a tree, and placed its head between two boughs of the tree, and hung himself.—Albert belonging to D. C. Jones was burned Tuesday night with all its contents, comprising fifteen cows, twenty hogs, hay, grain, tools, etc. The barn was one of the finest in town, and was built last year. There was an insurance of $3000 on the barn and stock.

Waldo.

John Killman's house in Prospect was burned recently with a part of its contents. Insured for $2500.

Pierce & Rowe of Frankfort, have obtained the contract to furnish granite for the completion of the New York and Brooklyn bridge, amounting to some $750,000. They will employ some 150 stone cutters and quarrymen, blacksmiths and others, to keep that number of men at work; this will give needed employment to a large number of men.

The Belfast shoe factory has laid in a very large stock of leather, and the appearances are that a considerable amount of work will be done in the future.

The Journal says that there has been an unusual amount of sickness in Belfast the present season, and the mortality among the young people has been large. The prevalent diseases have been fevers.

NEW MAGAZINES.

The WIDE AWAKE for November brings a feast of good things for the young folks. Following the full-page frontispiece "Pinky Posy and her Seven Little Doctors" is an unusually rich and inviting programme of stories, rhymes, instructive articles and interesting pictures. The table of contents is so full that we can mention only a few features such as the continuation of "Child Marion Abroad," chapter XI of the Adventures of Miltiades Peterkin Paul, No. 5 of that Cosey and Bossy Stories, No. 4 of Kitchen Helps, the concluding paper on Children's Etiquette, with lots of new and pleasant things quaintly illustrated. A fine sketch and portrait of the poet Edmund Clarence Stedman are given, and the departments of Tangled Knots, Parlor Pastimes, Post-office, and Music are full of novelties. The magazine is constantly improving under Miss Farman's management and is already a prime favorite with young and old. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., Boston. Price 20 cts. a number; $2.00 a year.

GOLDEN HOURS for November is a bright little volume, very prettily illustrated. Among the illustrated contents are "Among the Fishes," an interesting account of the great aquarium; "Legend of Frogtown," a ... "General ... and his Staff" and others. An interesting feature is chapter XII of "The King's Cousin" by Mrs. H. G. Rowe of this city, who has been engaged to take charge of the "Owlcome" department for December, which promises lots of Christmas amusement for the children. Published by Nelson & Phillips, New York, $1.60 per year post-paid.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for November presents an unusually attractive table of contents. Henry James, Jr., writes in his best vein of London at Midsummer, depicting with keen observation and delicate humor some of those traits in English character and manners which puzzle and amuse the foreigner. Different in style, but not less enjoyable, is a sketch of American rural life, The Doings and Goings-on of Hired Girls, by Mary Dean. W. A. Baillie-Grohman, author of a well-known work on the Tyrol, contributes an interesting historical paper, The Flight of a Princess, based on documents recently discovered in the Austrian archives, and Hugh Craig describes the celebrated church or mosque of Saint Sophia, at Constantinople, and the remarkable events of which it has been the scene. The illustrated papers, Chester and the Dee and Baden and Allerheiligen, are by Lady Blanche Murphy and T. Adolphus Trollope. The new serial, For Percival, is also illustrated. Mrs. Davis's story, A Law unto Herself, is brought to a conclusion in a well contrived denouement. The shorter stories are by Will Wallace Harney and Virginia W. Johnson; and the poetry by Epes Sargent, Oscar Leighton and G. Rosell. Russian and Turkish Music, in the Monthly Gossip, is a lively paper, and The Literature of the Day comprises notices of Mr. Parkinson's new work, Daudet's Jack, and other recent publications.

THE GALAXY for November is a number of more than ordinary interest even for this sterling magazine and the full list of matters it takes up this month is as follows: Five Days in the Tuscan Maremma; Love, from the German; Army Organization in the United States, by R. Williams; Her Oath, by Philip Bourke Marston; Administration of Abraham Lincoln; Radical Pleadings against Mr. Lincoln, by Gideon Welles; Maturity, by Mary B. Dodge; Hidden Influences in Public Assemblies, by E. Cordery; The Age of Bronze, Adapted from the French of Emile Barnouf, by John Austin Stevens; Fitz James and the Widow, by M. E. W. S.; To Richard Wagner; A dream of the age, by Sidney Lanier; Civil Service Reform, by John I. Platt; Freaks of Hymnology, by F. B. A.; In Warwickshire, by Henry James, Jr.; Sleep after Death, by Mary Ainge De Vere; "The Federal Language," Being a chapter on Americanisms, by Richard Grant White; Doubt, by Barton Grey; The Irrepressible Conflict in the East, by Thomas M. Anderson, U. S. A.; Drift-wood, by Philip Quilibet; The Struggle in the Orient; Turk and Indian; A Man's Aim and Success; Scientific Miscellany; The Moons of Mars; A Doubtful Date; The Air of the Ocean Depths; Zoological Gardens at Calcutta; Blast Furnace Gas Analysis; The Speaking Rate of Orators; Sunset Meteorology; Steppe Lands in Europe and America; Anomaly of the Law in 1877; Metals in the Sedimentary Rocks; A Decision Against Spontaneous Generation; The Use of Aniline Colors; Man not Economical as a Machine; The Origin of Diphtheria; The Summer Tornadoes; Scientific Items; Current Literature; Nebulæ.

The population in Wales doubles in fifty years, and in France in three hundred and sixty-one years. In this country the population doubles up once a year—green-apple time.

BANGOR MARKET.

SATURDAY, Oct. 20, 1877.

FLOUR. The markets during the past week have been quite firm, and prices well sustained, with no decided change in figures in favor of the seller, showing that the demand is just now holding a little the best hand, yet the supply still appears to be ample enough to relieve it.

THE TWO KENTUCKIANS

We usually take very little stock in the Washington specials of the Boston Herald, but the fact that the Herald correspondent was one of the newspaper clique which assumed special championship of Bristow and were admitted to confidential relations with him during the canvass last year, may lend some significance to the following statement of antagonism between Bristow and his former spokesman Gen Harlan

WASHINGTON Oct 18 The cause of the recent coolness between Harlan and Bristow has just leaked out It seems Bristow was [illegible] for the Supreme Bench and expected his appointment without any effort or trouble on his part Harlan went quietly to work getting up indorsements for himself and circulating the report that Bristow was not a candidate Before Bristow got knowledge of this Harlan had secured the support of the strong [illegible] in the Southwest and was in such a position that Bristow could not hope to beat him Bristow immediately ceased all friendly intercourse with Harlan and the feud waxed so hot that when the President went to Louisville Harlan did not invite Bristow to an entertainment which he gave in the President's honor whereupon Bristow got up an entertainment to which he did not invite Harlan

[illegible] the Boston Advertiser's special telegraph:

General Bristow and several of his most intimate Western friends have written very cordial letters here expressing a strong hope that General Harlan may be confirmed

The [illegible] Geo Alfred Townsend in a letter to the Graphic touches up Bristow and his newspaper [illegible] in this trenchant style

John M Harlan nominated for Supreme Court Justice from Kentucky is the best man to be obtained from the Republican party in that State He is courtly genial [illegible] educated sincere an altogether better lawyer than Bristow He was a Whig, and this is another old Whig appointment but as David Davis was a thoro-going Whig Harlan [illegible] fills the vacancy without change Mr Bristow is howling [illegible] of his reform [illegible] by [illegible] the small parcel of dead [illegible] and [illegible] all the newspaper investigators at Washington to attack Mr Harlan who nominated him and managed his case at Cincinnati Jealousy bull-headed ambition, exasperation and treachery are pretty well understood to be the components of Mr Bristow He has lived to know that [illegible] by newspaper sneaks and low detectives no man can reach the White House but will fall [illegible]

ALAS AND ALAS

If Gail Hamilton can [illegible] sweet [illegible] she must have smiled with amusement and triumph at reading in the columns of her whilom critic that [illegible] Administration organ the N Y Evening Post a melancholy confession that [illegible] civil reform as practiced under the present regime is not altogether lovely nor free from the foibles of poor human [illegible]

It looks [illegible] nominated by President Hayes to [illegible] the name of Alfred [illegible] the post of Consul General at Frankfort-on-the-Main [illegible] of the countries [illegible] by the German [illegible] relations with the United States were [illegible] important The Frankfort [illegible] the Government [illegible] of the Union [illegible] respects the post of Consul General at that city is one of [illegible] only [illegible] particularly qualified for the post by experience [illegible] consular [illegible] with the language of the country [illegible] in Frankfort [illegible] clerks [illegible] predecessor Mr [illegible] the secretary of Mr Hayes and in that capacity may have done good service but [illegible] the preparation of experience in Consulship and as we learn knows nothing of the German language For [illegible] must be learned in both [illegible] and walk for two or three years [illegible] of civil reform [illegible] responsible office which requires [illegible] training [illegible] who must perform his official duties [illegible] the instruction of others [illegible] see with their eyes and hear with their [illegible] and walk with their guidance until his official education is complete is no [illegible] improvement [illegible] practices of [illegible] appointments and we confess that the case of Mr Lee has bitterly disappointed us

The Tribune, in quoting this paragraph [illegible] it with the query Is this any worse than a good many others Perhaps an examination of the whole Ohio list of appointees might enlarge the Post's field of [illegible] and meanwhile we would suggest to that journal to ascertain and inform [illegible] how much the civil service reform is involved in removing Collector Arthur from an office which he has filled so satisfactorily [illegible] the President that he proposes to promote him to the more dignified post of Consul General at [illegible] with the duties of which he is quite as unfamiliar as Mr [illegible] while it is proposed to appoint to the Collectorship some new and untried person [illegible] to all the objections of inexperience [illegible] strongly urged by the Post in the single case of the ex private secretary Does the Post know that the cause of any changes at all in the New York offices is [illegible] the demand of political cliques?

They recently hung a liar out in the Black Hills and now our genial neighbor couldn't be persuaded to go to Dakota territory for any money.—Commercial

One would hardly suppose that the writer of such a paragraph as the above would have the hardihood to publish as a leading article on the same page a falsehood so deliberate and so transparent that no intelligent reader could fail to see the mendacity and malice of its author Yet the editor of the Commercial does just this in assailing the City Assessors with the charge of partiality in laying a higher tax on the Commercial than upon this paper The writer of that excessively stupid statement when slurring about the assessors' appreciation of the value of [illegible] paper property "was perfectly well aware that no tax whatever is assessed, as he states upon THE WHIG AND COURIER or the Commercial any more than a tax would be assessed upon the value of the business of a lawyer or a merchant The owners or proprietors of newspapers are assessed, like other property holders, upon the material and stock which they own, and the Commercial editor knows very well that while the proprietors of this paper are properly subject to assessment upon the stock and material used in publishing their paper, he is properly subject to assessment not only upon his newspaper plant, but upon the stock and materials of a job-printing establishment, concerning which he has recently announced "choice additions of the new and most elegant styles of type to our already large stock," and facilities for executing all kinds of work from "the largest poster to the smallest label" The Commercial editor is also well aware that the proprietors of this paper long since disposed of their entire job-printing material and business and that when he represents the assessments referred to as having been made respectively upon the two newspapers he publishes a very shameless and ridiculous falsehood. We desire to contribute our full share of taxation upon the property employed in our business but our contemporary must rely implicitly upon the ignorance of his readers if he thinks to make a grievance because the assessors have not taxed us as much upon the material of a newspaper office as upon his newspaper office and job-printing establishment combined

The Democrats in the House have set the Senate a good example of unpartizan devotion to principles in seating Darrell Rainey and Cain Will the Republicans of the Senate be equally just and allow Spofford Eustis and Butler who hold certificates from the same Executives to take their seats in that body?—Portland Argus

Messrs Darrell, Rainey and Cain held certificates from the Republican State officers of Louisiana and South Carolina, Spofford Eustis and Butler claim seats on irregular and worthless papers made out by the Democratic revolutionists in those States Wade Hampton who sent a written protest against admitting Messrs Rainey and Cain, would doubtless be edified by the bold statement of the Argus As to partisanship, the Democratic Election Committee of the House have not finished with the contests yet and we have had some conspicuous examples of the kind of principle meted out to Republicans at their hands. A strong side-light is thrown upon the action in the House by the following remark of a Senator on the subject indicating how well it is understood in Washington that the Republicans were temporarily admitted solely in order to humbug the Senate

While Rainey and others have been given their seats as possessors of the certificates, their ultimate ousting is certain, but they can be kept in the Committee of Contested Elections hopeful until the Senate has acted on its own contestants

THOSE RELIABLE SPECIALS The valuable quality of the information as to the personal feelings and purposes of public men sent out from Washington by the special correspondents of the Democratic guerilla press is illustrated by the following rather inharmonious reports on the same subject

[Special to Boston Herald]

A very interesting interview between Hayes and Blaine is reported to have occurred a day or two ago, details of which have not transpired Blaine speaks of the Administration privately in the most contemptuous terms and is understood to have given the President a piece of his mind

[Special to Springfield Republican]

Senator Blaine had a very pleasant hour with the President early this week and the character of his conversation was such as to leave the impression at the White House that he did not expect to say anything on the floor of the Senate that could be construed as an attack on the President

Both of these specials are simply emanations from the inventive faculties of the writers and telegraphed for sensational padding to their despatches Mr Blaine is not rushing around with a chip on his shoulder but attending to his duties Sooner or later as questions of importance arise the public will not be left in doubt as to his views concerning them He has given no indication of a purpose to attack the President and [illegible] will give as little thought to the manner in which his utterances may be construed at the White House when he feels called upon to discuss the merits of any public question

Welcome to Rev Mr Fay

There was a very pleasant gathering in the vestry of the Hammond Street Church on last Saturday evening to welcome Rev S P Fay, who with his daughter, returned the day before from an absence of about two months in Europe A little before 6 o'clock the pastor and his family were invited to the vestry, he not knowing until a few minutes before, of the purpose for which he was called He found a good representative of his Parish and a few other friends who had been invited to meet with them and during the evening there were large additions to the number The room was made attractive by a generous supply of flowers, evergreens and autumn leaves, which were finely arranged in vases and wreaths and around numerous illuminated mottos In front was the word "Welcome" surrounded by a rich and tasteful display of flowers &c

At 7 o'clock it was announced that refreshments had been provided The pastor said a few words with much emotion, at the unexpected and delightful reception given, and called upon Rev Dr Field to lead in prayer and to ask a blessing The refreshments which had been provided were abundant and choice

Previous to this, and subsequently the greetings of the pastor and people were cordial, and the opportunity of social intercourse was fully and gladly improved Near the close of this happy occasion a Trio was sung by Mrs Crowell, Mrs Butman and Mr F I Crowell (piano accompaniment by Mrs Davenport) which was finely rendered, and received hearty applause Mrs Crowell was [illegible] the recipient of a beautiful basket [illegible] The close Mr Fay gave evidence of having received benefit from his brief absence and ready to enter with fresh zeal upon his work.

A large audience were present yesterday forenoon in the Church, where some of the flowers and autumn gatherings of the evening previous were arranged The choir sang an appropriate selection and the congregation united with them in singing the Hymn "Praise God from whom all blessings flow"

After devotional exercises Mr Fay preached a discourse from Ps 77, 19—"Thy way is in the sea, &c" Having been 38 days on the sea his thoughts were turned in that direction, and he spoke of the material uses of the great mass of water—occupy three-fifths of the world's space—of the material uses of the sea, the economy of its creation—as a highway of nations—as a promoter of health—a purifier—of its treasures as food for the dwellers on the earth—and other points of interest The goodness and wisdom of God was shown in all these respects, calling for a recognition of Him, and love to Him!

Decisions in Law

The following decisions of the full Court have been transmitted to the Clerk of Courts for this County

William McDonald & ux vs Levi B Patten

Per [illegible]—The declaration alleges that [illegible] plaintiff [illegible] and falsely [illegible] purchase said real and personal property This is [illegible] a technical allegation that the plaintiff was induced to make [illegible] purchase in consequence of the alleged false statement [illegible] the person and case The defect is therefore amendable [illegible]

[illegible] the statement relied upon to sustain the action so far as relates to the real estate is that the farm [illegible] year previous to the sale produced fifty tons of hay [illegible] If false and fraudulent, and [illegible] plaintiff relying upon it was thereby induced to make the purchase to his injury is an actual fraud [illegible] Jordan 60 Me 531

The testimony relied upon to show that it was a estimate fails to do so The statement appears to have been direct and positive and those subsequently made are in keeping with assertions of estimate and apparently used rather for the purpose of inducing belief in the first than in any respect qualifying it But it is not a fact for the jury There is also testimony tending to show that the statement was made that it was false and known to be so [illegible] induced to make the purchase and was thereby deceived and defrauded [illegible] of it to require the case to be submitted to the jury.

Edmund H. Fogg & al vs. Sophronia S. Getchell [illegible]

Rescript—This action if sustained must be upon the account annexed It is plain that the goods [illegible] were purchased by one Mr [illegible] Getchell in his own name and upon his own credit, but that without the knowledge of the plaintiffs he was really acting as the agent of the defendants Hence the contract of agency is at the foundation of the action and the burden of proof to show it rests upon the plaintiffs That Getchell was an agent for the expenditure of money in erecting the house into which the articles were put may be considered as established by the proof and does not appear to be denied But an agency to purchase materials for the house upon credit is another and a very different thing It is sought to establish this last by circumstantial testimony. A careful examination of the evidence fails to show anything which is not equally as well explained upon the agency admitted by the defendants as upon that claimed by the plaintiffs. Therefore it fails utterly to establish any ground upon which the action can be sustained

On the other hand, the testimony assuming all that was put in by the plaintiffs as admissible, shows clearly that no such agency existed Nor do the plaintiffs stand any better upon the ground of ratification [illegible] there must be an assumed agency before the principal can be called upon to affirm or deny. In this case Getchell did not assume in the purchase of these articles to act as the agent of any one, or to [illegible] payment except himself. [illegible] is one by which he alone would be liable A ratification of it would neither enlarge or diminish its binding force, but simply to establish its original character Upon this point too the evidence [illegible] fail to show any ratification even if there had been an assumed agency There is some testimony tending to show that in other cases the defendants may have ratified some acts of their agent outside of his agency, but none whatever in this case

On the other hand the evidence fails to show the knowledge that any such claim was made [illegible] repudiated [illegible] And whatever their course of dealing with others might have bound them to in relation to any contracts made [illegible] no course of dealing with the [illegible] inference on their part that the alleged agent was authorized to bind them to the contract here set up Nor did they draw any such inference for the articles were not sold trusting in any degree to their credit. This view of the facts renders it unnecessary to consider the several questions of law raised

After judgment of this Court charging a trustee a demand by an officer of the Trustee [illegible] by virtue of an execution issued on such judgment within thirty days from its rendition is equivalent to a seizure of the property of the debtor on execution [illegible] the credit is finally virtually created and not dissolved by the [illegible] above cited

GRANT AND SUMNER.

WENDELL PHILLIPS AS A[illegible] IN DEFENCE OF SUMNER—EX SECRETARY FISH CONFIRMS THE STATEMENT OF GRANT

On Thursday evening Wendell Phillips delivered an address on Charles Sumner before the Young Men's Christian Association of Newton, in which he made a fierce and intemperate assault upon ex President Grant in defence of the Massachusetts Senator. He said

General Grant has thrown the weight of his animosity against Mr Sumner I have great respect for General Grant I have been a Grant man when Faneuil Hall hissed me for it I acknowledge his merits I have no doubt of his sincere patriotism But General Grant must remember that when he impeaches history and the [illegible] patriotism there are blows to take as well as to give and it is himself that provoked the quarrel * * * But General Grant says that Mr Sumner lied I remember the occasion [illegible] Mr Sumner received from the hands of General Grant the treaty of San Domingo—from General Grant, who drove up to his door while he was sitting with some friends at dinner table He said to the President I will look at the bill I trust I shall have the pleasure of supporting the Administration. These were words of politeness of courtesy merely—without having examined the instrument When he went home and examined it he found the dark treachery to the black race The next day he found General Grant and took back only the courteous words He pointed out the objection to the treaty and before him the impossibility of his supporting it, and urged a reconsideration of the action of the Administration General Grant listened in silence perhaps I might say sullen silence There was present a gentleman who has been in Washington for forty years, and he came away with Mr Sumner As they came down the stairs of the Executive Mansion the gentleman remarked What is the matter with the President? Do you think he [illegible] I should think he might, replied Sumner [illegible] courteous pledge in the chamber of the White House [illegible] to perform its office. [illegible] of the verdict of the Senate from Massachusetts General Grant also refers to the [illegible] of Mr Sumner in [illegible] of his friend Mr Motley The case is a grave one It concerns one of the noblest Americans who upheld our fame abroad * * In the quarrel with Mr Motley the records of the State Department [illegible] black and white prove that the Administration [illegible] Mr Fish told Mr Sumner [illegible] the British [illegible]—tell him he ought to go to London Six months later the Minister was recalled on the ground that he had acted too much upon the opinion of a great Northern Senator Mr. Sumner's indignant exclamation to Mr Fish was [illegible] Mr Motley's [illegible] was an unpardonable sin by what right did you sit [illegible] study six months ago and urge me to go to England and press my views on the Alabama claims? He said then and there, "Sir, you are a tool of the President for base purposes and this removal is out of spite." And it is true The testimony is on the files of the diplomatic service

MR PHILLIPS' STATEMENTS CONTRADICTED BY EX SECRETARY FISH

Ex Secretary Hamilton Fish being in Boston attending the Episcopal Convention, the Traveller sent a reporter to call upon him with reference to Mr Phillips' statements and during the conversation Mr. Fish, whose word will hardly be questioned in any quarter, made the following statement of facts

With regard to the alleged negligence of the late Mr Sumner while chairman of the foreign affairs committee Mr. Fish said it was a fact that was susceptible of proof from the Senate records that drafts of treaties from eight to eleven in number remained in the hands of the committee for several months, some of them, as near as Mr Fish could remember, for more than two years. Mr Fish did not impute this delay of public business to negligence on the part of Mr Sumner, the fact however remained that business was delayed together with another fact that after Mr Sumner's retiring the entire batch of treaties was disposed of in less than four months

The reasons for the removal of Mr Sumner from the chairmanship of the foreign affairs committee were then spoken of. The statement that President Grant placed the San Domingo treaty into Mr Sumner's hands, as related by Mr Phillips Mr Fish characterized as ridiculously untrue The President never had the treaty papers in his possession They were in the hands of the Secretary of State The facts were these: The President in conversation with Mr Sumner, laid before that gentleman the features of the treaty This information was imparted orally, no written or printed document was read to the Senator. Mr Sumner made no opposition to any of its features; indeed, so warmly did he express his approval of it that a gentleman present at the interview, who prior to that time, had placed himself in opposition to the measure, was made friendly to it solely by the arguments used by Mr Sumner

Mr Fish says that Mr Sumner continued to favor the treaty until the selection of a commissioner to San Domingo came up for settlement, and when he found that J M Ashley of Ohio was not to be the nominee he then all at once lost interest in the treaty, and finally he placed himself in direct opposition to it

The conversation between President Grant and Mr. Sumner took place toward the last of December, 1869 or the first of January following, and in February Mr Fish says, two senators, Carl Schurz and Mr. Stewart of Nevada, gentlemen of opposite political views, canvassed the Senate, and found the treaty could not pass that body, that it was dead

Mr Sumner was not removed from the foreign committee at the reassembling of Congress in the fall, but upon the meeting of the new Congress in 1871 he was not reappointed His term had expired; he was not removed There were good reasons for his being left off the committee at this time, Mr Fish thinks. He was not at that time on speaking terms with either the President or the Secretary of State a most unpleasant state of things to exist between the holder of so important a position [illegible] the first officers of the administration.

Mr. Fish, on being asked whether he had ever urged the English mission upon Mr Sumner, said there was a long story connected with that, which he proceeded to tell, as follows

He called upon Mr Sumner one day in the spring of 1870, and finding that gentleman in seeming great distress, said to him "Mr. Sumner, you are wronging yourself to let things trouble you as you do Now the San Domingo treaty is dead, the Senate has been canvassed by men of both sides, and it can't go through Why don't you report it and have done with it?" Mr. Sumner replied with much emotion, "Mr Fish, you can't understand my situation Your family relations are all pleasant. Why, many and many a night when I go to bed I almost wish that I may never awake," Mr Fish advised him to seek new scenes; told him he was getting morbid over his troubles and spoke of a visit to Europe as temporary relief Mr. Sumner said he couldn't go, as he had his book to finish Mr Fish said that need not interfere The Duke of Argyll and others in England would be glad to receive him into their homes, where he would be shown abundant opportunity for study and writing Mr Sumner then advanced the objection that he could not well afford the expense Upon this Mr Fish says he incautiously remarked Why not go as a minister? This was said on the moment without previous thought, and was the result of Mr Fish's warm friendship for and personal interest in Mr Sumner The Secretary for the instant forgot, in his personal sympathy that he was a government officer Mr Sumner, he said brightened up at once when this suggestion was dropped and his eagerness somewhat alarmed Mr Fish who then saw that he had said too much

Mr Sumner said he did not like to interfere with his friend Motley upon which Mr Fish, seeing an opportunity to retrace his steps told him he might go in his private capacity that there would be a long recess of Congress, which would give him ample time to make a visit abroad Mr Fish says this was all the "angling" he ever did upon Mr Sumner to take the place at St James

The reason for Mr Motley's removal was found in considerations of State He misrepresented the Government on the Alabama question especially in the two speeches made by him before his arrival at his post

Mr Fish said he always entertained the highest feelings of friendship and esteem for Mr Motley and pained him when he was forced to communicate with Mr Moran our consul at Liverpool, instead of Mr Motley

Mr Fish denied the conversation between him and Mr Sumner, whereby the latter said "Sir you are the tool of the President for base purposes, and this removal is out of spite" Mr Phillips he said quoted it from a speech purporting to have been delivered by Mr Sumner in the United States Senate But that speech was never delivered There [illegible] the opportunity present itself when it might have been introduced but upon neither occasion was it heard About a hundred copies of it were printed for semi private circulation and one gentleman having a copy of it read it before an assembly of twenty five or thirty, among whom was a member of the Washington press, and through him it became known to the Administration

Mr Fish said in speaking of the attitude of Carl Schurz that he was in sympathy with Mr Sumner in unfriendly feeling toward the late Administration and he thought an examination of the bulky pamphlet issued by Mr Curtis upon Mr Sumner in this city would fail to discover many of the assertions reflecting upon General Grant's government found in the speech of Mr Schurz

GLENBURN EXHIBITION AND FAIR.

The annual exhibition and fair of the Glenburn Farmers' Club, was held at the Town House in Glenburn, on Thursday Sept. 27th. The weather was very fine, and all circumstances seemed favorable for a good exhibition. Many had striven hard to make the exhibition a success, and had confidently hoped that a cattle show and fair would be held, of which the citizens of Glenburn might well be proud. Nor were they disappointed in their estimate of what the people of Glenburn could do. Their expectations were more than realized. The citizens very generally took hold of the matter, with a resolution and a determination which insured success; and before 9 o'clock in the morning, the grounds were occupied by a hundred head of neat stock, and a most excellent show of horses sheep, swine and poultry; and the two spacious halls of the Tow House were thoroughly filled with grain, fruit, vegetables and manufactured articles, many of which would compare favorably with anything in their various classes exhibited at the New England Fair at Portland. The several committees are entitled to much praise for the faithful and efficient manner in which they did their work of making their examination and reports, and they award premiums as follows:

The Committee on Fruit by some means understood that the fine show of Apples, Pears and Grapes contributed by John E. Bennock, Esq., was for exhibition only, and did not award him any premium. Otherwise he doubtless would have been awarded first premiums in the several classes to which he contributed; and the society feel that they are under many obligations to him for the interest he manifested in, and the contributions he made to their annual festival.

The Glenburn Farmers' Club is in a flourishing and healthy condition, having paid its premiums, and all other bills, in full, and has a surplus of money now in the Treasury.

W. E. GIBBS, Secretary.

Science says that it took millions of years to evolve man from the clam; observation shows that it takes less than a minute to transfer the clam into a man.

COOL NIGHTS.—Let us not deceive ourselves. These cool nights will not absolve us from any of the penalties that follow a defiance of the laws of health. On the contrary, they bring sudden changes and transformations that are insidious and dangerous. Noxious influences lurk behind the pleasant sensations afforded by the cool and stimulating air. Now is the time when fevers await the unwary victim and the seeds of epidemics are sown. The days are healthy, but beware of the nights, for they are certain disease-breeders if the evening zephyrs are too freely inhaled. The best place for the family is within doors now, after the twilight shadows begin to fall.

A school mistress in a suburban town, who had long been annoyed by the perversities of a male pupil of nineteen, on one of the closing days of last term kept him in and undertook to whale him. He, however, disarmed her, and returned several kisses for each blow.—The schoolmistress, unable to forgive this breach of discipline, looked him sternly in the face, and, shaking her forefinger at him in a menacing manner, said, solemnly, "William, I will give you precisely fifteen minutes to stop hugging me, and if you disobey me I shall punish you severely."

There were three of them—a man and two women. They saw the sign of "Arctic Soda Water" swinging in the breeze, and they went in and said they'd take about three drinks. "What syrup?" asked the confectioner. The man's wife, who was one of the two women, turned her husband around so that his back was to the fountain, and then said: "Now, William, if you want lemon and vanilla or vanilla and cream, speak right up, for you won't have a chance to say 'vanilla' and cream, and wink for him to put in whiskey!" The husband's countenance fell, but he had to quietly submit. He has been wondering ever since, how his wife could have dropped on the practice.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell, at public or private sale and convey the whole of the late homestead of said deceased, situate on French Street in said Bangor, as the residue would be greatly depreciated by the sale of any portion thereof, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds of said County.
